ELEPHANTS AS NURSES.

Children In India Often Cared For by the Big Brutes. bury, Ohio.

It is by no means uncommon in India for the children of a mahout to be cared for by the mahout's elephant. The whole family of the mahout become, as it were, parasites to the elephant by which they earn their living. Instances are not wanting of a mothrials to cook the family meal.

Now, how shall I pox, eight of mumps, three of measles, it is for a jackul or a wolf to carry off a baby when it is lying in a but or when the mother is unprovided with FOUR LINES FOR 25 CENTS means to fight off the marauder.

Children thus brought up in the companionship of an elephant become ridiculously familiar with the big pachyderm and take all kind of liberties with him-liberties which the ele phant seems to endure on the principle that it does not hurt him, while it amuses the child. One may see a little native child, quite naked, about two feet high, standing on an elephant's bare back and taking it down to the water to bathe, vociferating all the time in most unbecoming terms of native abusive language. On arriving at the water the elephant, ostensibly in obedience to the child's command.

A Pun That Pleased Victoria and One That Hit Albert Edward.

Caroline Fox in her memorials under date of May 24, 1837, Queen Victoria's birthday, jots down an egreglous pun reported by her famous kinsman, Charles James Fox. "Uncle Charles dined with us today. He was delighted and dazzled by the display on the queen's day and mentioned a right merry quibble perpetrated by my Lord Albemarie, who on her majesty's saying, 'I wonder if my good people of London are as glad to see me as I am to see them? pointed out as their immediate cockney answer to the query 'V.
